FUN IN THE HOUSE

The funny men of the house of representatives indulged in a good deal of merriment over the Adams whipping post bill Monday. Incidentally, the bill was tabled by a large majority. Mr. Stanley of Kentucky was specially facetious in his remarks. Among other things, he said that more women are suffering pain because they are not married than suffer because they are beaten by their husbands. The Kentuckian permitted himself some more drive of the same sort.

It does not seem to us that there is any occasion for humor in a bill which is designed to check the evil of wifebeating. The Washington chief of police had reported nearly 600 cases of this character in a single year. It may be true that in most of the cases a negro was the victim but that doesn't mitigate the brutality of the offense or lessen the necessity for severe measures to end it.

The Herald is of the opinion that the only proper method of punishing a wife-beater is to whip him. Nothing so reminds a brute, one who is fond of inflicting physical pain on others, of the error of his way as effectively as the administration of physical pain to himself. He should be made to suffer as he has made his wife or other woman to suffer. Such men feel no disgrace from a jail sentence.

One who is low and mean enough to strike a woman is too base to feel any ordinary disgrace. They would not feel any disgrace in being whipped, but they would feel pain. The inadequacy of a jail sentence is further exemplified by the fact that such punishment falls most heavily upon the woman who has already suffered. She is deprived for the time of her support, such as it is, and she must feel the pinch of poverty.

The whipping post bill was not a bad one, and it is a real pity that it was defeated. Women should not live with husbands who beat them, but when, through a mistaken idea of loyalty, they persist in doing so, the law should give them a reasonable measure of protection, even an unusual measure.

Wood, in any length, can be obtained at Petersen & Springmeyer's hay and wood yard, south Carson St.

The new camp of Palmetto is to have a paper the first issue is to be published on next Friday.
